Abstract

The existence of the Food and Drug Supervisory Agency (BPOM) which has the authority to investigate in criminal acts against food and drugs has an important role in strengthening the protection of community rights, especially in the health sector, because health concerns the quality of life of the people and human resources Indonesian nation. However, there are several problems faced by BPOM in carrying out their duties, including philosophical probematics of the authority of BPOM as a drug and food supervisor does not seem to provide a tendency to justice but has the potential to reverse, Theoretical Problems with BPOM authority in the form of Presidential Regulations, and Juridical Problems, namely there is an unsynchronization regarding BPOM's authority arrangement. The purpose of this research is to analyze, and find legal implications that can arise from the condition of the authority of BPOM investigators in law enforcement in the fields of drugs, food and beverages. This research uses normative legal research methods with the statute approach, and conceptual approach. The analytic technique of this research is using evaluative analysis. The results showed that although Presidential Regulation Number 80 Year 2017 provides enforcement authority which also has implications for the BPOM deputy enforcement structure, the type of presidential regulation does not provide PPNS legal force to take action optimally, so there are limitations to the role of National Land Agency (BPN) Civil Servant Investigators (PPNS). National Land Agency (BPN) Civil Servant Investigators (PPNS).
