Abstract

Main objective of this study is to present a business strategy where the activities and behaviors of students are monitored by teachers. This particular strategy includes a written list which consists of keeping records on student's achievements throughout the week and it is supposed to be forwarded to parents early in the week to present the daily activities of their children at school. This research was conducted based on the interest of parents in the performance and school life of their children. Therefore, it is considered that this list information is the most convenient way of having a genuine cooperation among teachers and parents.

Based on the analysis of the data derived from this research, it is concluded that parents are quite satisfied with the implementation of such working strategy, because they are constantly informed about the work or lack of work of their children at school, and that through this type of cooperation it is led to a closer access on the results achieved for weekly performances of their children.

Keywords: list information, teacher-parent, teachers, cooperation.
