

Language and Law seen through “Canon of Laberia” Greek - Albanian terminological words

PhD Marina Kaishi
University of Tirana

Abstract

Law and language are linked together. If we use a direct language to express law, it will be more understandable for the audience. If we interpret it in the right way, again the audience will better understand law. Moreover if we interpret it right, even the verdict will be disposed the right way.

According to the legal terminology, we are interested to the words that Albanian language has taken from Greek language. I am not speaking about modern times, but if we see back in time there are a lot of similarities between Greek – Albanian terminological words or better say words of Greek roots. In order to give evidence about this phenomenon we will analyze or better try to analyze “Canon of Laberia”. There are many words deriving from Greek language and used into the Albanian language. Why do I believe so?

Because through reading “Canon of Laberia” we will analyze its words, knowing that both are two Balkan countries.

Keywords: judicial terminology, Greek language, Albanian language similarities, Canon.

Full Text: PDF

This work is licensed under Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 License.

Academic Journal of Business, Administration, Law and Social Sciences ISSN 2410-3918 (print)

ISSN 2410-8693 (online)

Copyright © IIPCCCL-International Institute for Private, Commercial and Competition law